

DMC welcome letter

Contents

Dear participants,

Welcome to “Tale of Defiance to Mind Control in the Modern Age”. I am looking forward to our learning together.

We meet on Monday, Period 2 (11:10 am to 12:35 pm), in person at 51 Sawyer Road, Room ?. Classes meet on November 2, 9, 16, 23, and 30.

You can view the course website at the following link: November 2026: DMC course web site. Note that I use the acronym “DMC” as shorthand for the name of the course. The header of the course web site has a dropdown box in the upper left that allows one to select the page to appear in the frame below the header.

The full web site is still under construction, but you can view all the following now¹:

- this DMC welcome letter,
- the DMC course syllabus,
- a more detailed DMC course overview, and
- the page for DMC week 1.

So that I can verify that all email address work, and so that I can begin learning about you, please respond to this note with a brief email with your name, what town you live in, your background, what sparked your interest in taking this class, and anything else that you think is relevant. It’s not at all essential, but I wouldn’t mind a picture so that I can start the process of connecting your faces and names, which I apologize in advance for being a little slow at. Please also let me know what information in your response email that you authorize me to share with the class. I will combine that information into a single email, which I plan to send to the class on November 1.

With the exception of personal information about students, such in the last paragraph, all class materials will be accessible from the website. I also plan to send out everything through email as well. For example, I am attaching

This email will be an exception to

(Note: I will not put any information about class participants on the web site, unless I feel the need to give someone attribution and I have permission to do so.)

To give us a chance to learn about each other, it would be great if ¹This is our first footnote. Footnotes are always optional. This particular footnote is a rather technical point, which can definitely be ignored by everyone but web experts. On the web, clicking on a footnote reference (a raised number) moves to the particular footnote at the bottom of the web page. Clicking on the curvy arrow () at the end of the footnote, goes back to the point where the footnote was referenced.

When I send links to course page in email, I give a direct link to the page in isolation. For experts, one can see the same page below the frame by preceeding the last part of the html link with `index.html?page=`, for example, this changes the link

DMC welcome letter.

A pdf version of a page can often be obtain by changing the trailing `.html` to `.pdf`. For example, here is a link for the DMC welcome letter, pdf version

I'd also like to learn about you, so please say a bit about your background and what sparked your interest in taking the class. Then I'll reply back personally to you.
After I receive a group of responses, I will put your responses together on the Home page of the web site, so that we can learn about each other.
